

CYCLETOPIA

Cherie Walkowiak
Advocate / Project Organizer

Mission: promote road designs safe enough for children

Vision: network of bikeways and walkways

SHARE

STEAL THIS IDEA: A $600 PROTECTED BIKE LANE DEMO AT AN OPEN-STREETS EVENT

January 24, 2014

Michael Andersen, Green Lane Project staff writer

Chrissy Lee of the Minneapolis Bicycle Coalition sets up a "pop up" bike lane demo last summer.

Sometimes the best ways to spread the idea of protected bike lanes are the simplest.

In Minneapolis, where a new community coalition has set a target to build 30 miles of new protected bike lanes by 2020, fans of protected bike lanes hit on a cheap and easy way to reach the heart of their target market — people who like to ride bikes but feel uncomfortable mixing with auto traffic.

They got together to construct 15 plywood planters and then set them up at each of the city's four summertime Open Streets events. Here's a video showing how it looked at the event:

RELATED ARTICLES

> Real estate: Protected lanes lauded, painted ones ignored

> Surprise applause line: 'Protected bike lanes'

> Bikesharing & protected lanes: The peanut butter & chocolate of better biking

> Bike spike: More proof that riders prefer protected lanes

COMMUNITY STORIES

> Sixty Two

SEE ALL >

Goals

- Education

THIS IS A
SEPARATED
BIKEWAY

ALSO CALLED A
PROTECTED
BIKE LANE

ALSO CALLED A
TRACK

10'
SINGLE
CAR LANE
12'

ALSO CALLED A
CYCLE TRACK

Goals

- Education
- Support

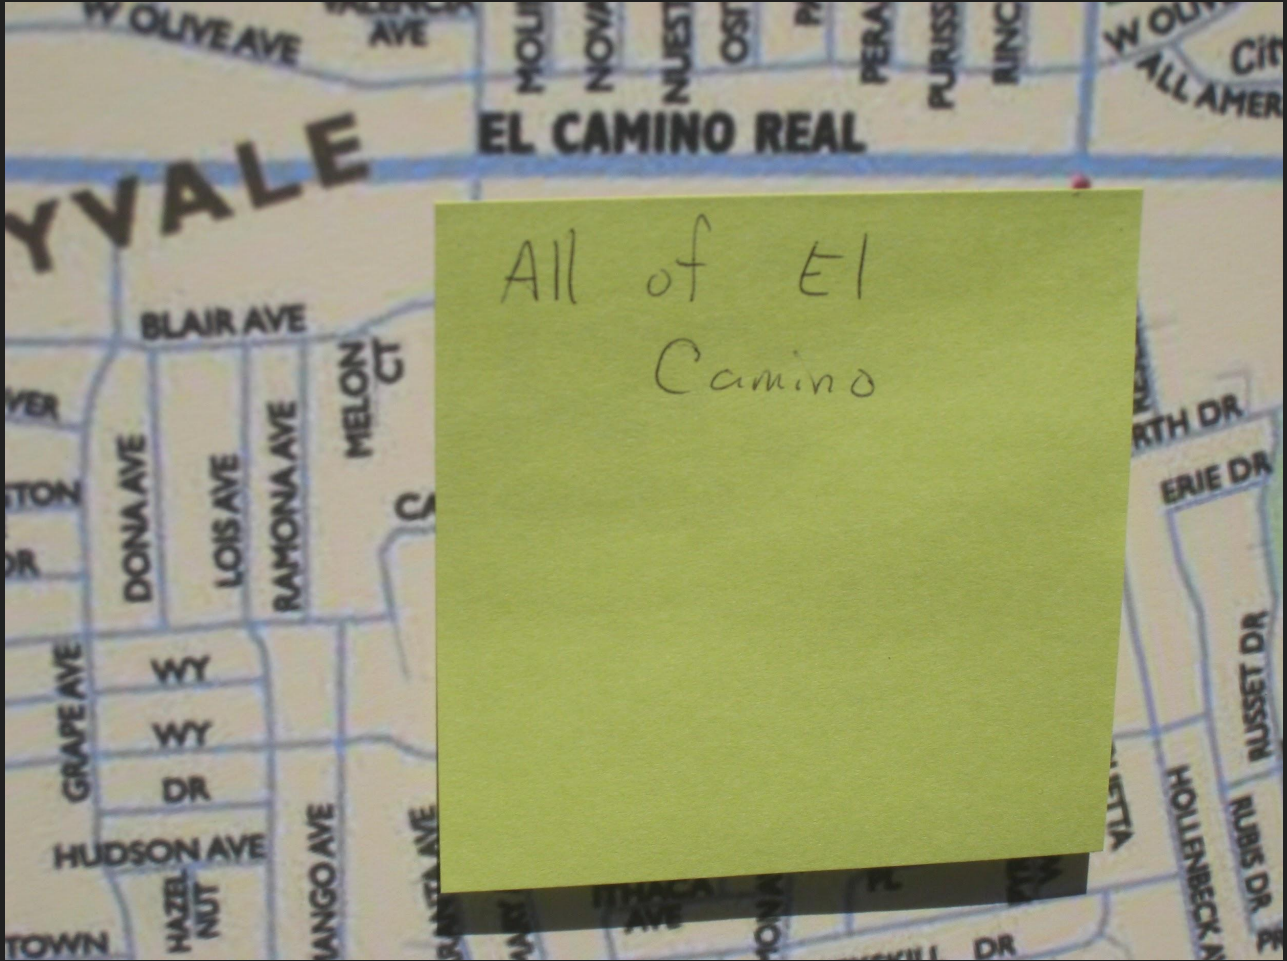

Goals

- Education
- Support
- Input

All of El
Camino

Goals

- Education
- Support
- Input
- Fun

Goals

- Education
- Support
- Input
- Fun

Challenges

- Place

Challenges

- Place
- Space

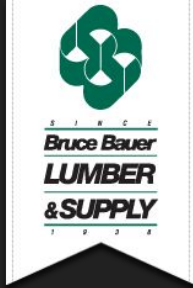

Challenges

- Place
- Space
- Funds

Partners

SILICON VALLEY
BICYCLE
COALITION

Thank You!

www.SafeMountainView.org/cycletopia

Protected Intersection Demo in Minneapolis

